

Diane E. Israel

Diane E Israel, an artist known for her captivating miniature watercolors, has dedicated over five decades to the world of art. As a former gallery owner of Essex Fine Arts Gallery in Montclair, New Jersey, she cultivated her passion for providing a platform to fellow artists and nurturing artistic talent. Diane's expertise extends beyond miniature watercolors; she is also skilled in photography, graphic design, and calligraphy.

Beyond her artistic pursuits, Diane is a passionate educator. As a certified art teacher K-12, she has dedicated her time to guiding young minds and instilling a love for art in her students. Diane believes that art has the power to transform lives, and she strives to create an inspiring learning environment where students can explore their creativity and discover their artistic potential.

Diane's involvement in various organizations further exemplifies her dedication to the art community. As a member of the International Guild of Miniature Artisans (IGMA), the National Association of Miniature Enthusiasts (NAME), and the Miniature Art Society of Florida (MASF), she actively participates in exhibitions, workshops, and events that promote and celebrate the art of miniatures.

Locally, Diane is a valued member and program chair of the Lacey Historical Society, where she plays a crucial role in organizing and facilitating historical and cultural programs for the community. Her commitment to preserving local history and promoting community engagement shines through in her work as a social media director for the organization.

Diane is also a dedicated member and teacher at the Ocean County Artists Guild, where she shares her knowledge and expertise with fellow artists. Through her teaching, Diane aims to foster a supportive and creative environment where artists of all levels can grow and evolve in their artistic journeys.
